How the 2020 election war on bots and trolls differs from 2016

Since, economically, war is waste, and it wastes existing — not future — manpower, capital goods, and raw materials, it is clear that the real cost of waging war is borne by the living who are deprived of things that in the absence of war could be produced and consumed in ordinary peacetime life. No amount of fiscal hocus pocus can change that reality.

“War is a barbaric tool of the war profiteers and Empires who employ them. War pits young people from the working class against other similarly poor, or disadvantaged humans, for nothing but the greed of the few. Only we the people can make war obsolete by not participating in the profound crimes of the profiteers and other war mongers” — Cindy Sheehan
